

Studies in Women and Gender at the University of Virginia invites applications for a tenure-track appointment at the rank of Assistant Professor to begin August 25, 2008. Responsibilities include teaching half-time in Studies in Women and Gender, and half-time in the department of appointment. Disciplinary specialization is open. Candidates must have demonstrated expertise in women and gender studies, with a focus on contemporary African-American women. We seek candidates whose research and teaching examine intersections of gender with race and ethnicity, class, sexuality and/or other forms of identity. Areas of special interest include women's health and the environment; science and technology; gendered literary and visual representations; and/or media and popular culture.

We encourage applications from women and minorities and from candidates who can contribute to the diversity and excellence of the University community through their research, teaching, and service. Ph.D. in hand by time of appointment. Review of applications will begin November 15, 2007.

The position will remain open until filled. Candidates should submit a letter of application describing qualifications; CV; statement of teaching philosophy; and one sample of written work.
