ABOUT

Amanda is a certified School Social Worker and an Associate Education Consultant in the Department of Education. She has a variety of experiences in mental and behavioral health and supporting the integration of mental health in school service delivery models. Her decade working with children, families, schools, and communities began with supporting transitioning students in the Open Choice Program.

Other experiences include supervising a home visiting program, serving as a social worker for CT’s Birth to Three system, and providing coordination and facilitation of training and supports in schools’ capacity to provide mental health supports through multi-tiered systems, restorative practices, community collaboration, racial equity, and classroom management. Amanda is an endorsed PBIS trainer, Courageous Conversations about Race Affiliate, and a licensed Restorative Practices trainer. She is an avid proponent of collaboration and bringing multiple voices and perspectives to the table.
